

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A method of transferring at least two data streams in a medical device is provided. First data stream data is collected into a first intermediate register. Additional data stream data is collected into an additional intermediate register. First intermediate register contents are stored in at least one first output register. Systems and devices for using the method are also provided.